Class Wearing Rings With New Design

by Grey Holland

The Junior Class at Appomattox High School are very proud of their new class rings which they received last week. We are especially proud because we designed our new rings and we kept in mind the centennial.

On the right side of the ring, the McLean House is engraved. Below the McLean House are crossed swords with a little banner with the inscription "Rebels". Above the McLean House 65 is engraved. A cannon and a "Rebel" cap flank both sides of the 65.

On the left side of the ring, the seal of Virginia is engraved. A tiny dogwood is below the seal. 19 is engraved above the seal. On either side of the 19, are a "Rebel" flag and a Virginia flag.

A variety of stones were used. Around the stone "Appomattox High School" is engraved. And around this there are 65 little chain links, signifying the Class of 1965.

We are very proud of our rings and the fact that we are from such a historic town. 100 years after the Civil War, our class still remembered the importance and significance of this war by designing our rings in keeping with the Centennial.

Zip Code Is Economy Move

The Post Office Department's ZIP Code was defined today by Appomattox County Postmaster as an economy measure to cope with the nation's mounting mail volume without an "unmanageable" increase in its workroom personnel.

"Economy is the watchword of this Administration", they said. "President Lyndon Johnson has directed us to provide the best possible service at the least possible cost. Now, end in the future, ZIP Code will help us to contain the cost of this mail explosion and meet President Johnson's objectives."

ZIP Code already has wide acceptance the Postmasters said, but its continued progress will depend on the voluntary cooperation of the mailing public.

"If we didn't have ZIP Code," they said, "and if we didn't have wholehearted public support for the program, in a few years the avalanche of mail burdening our post office could make the blizzard of '88 seem like a gentle snow flurry.

"The only alternative to ZIP Code would be an enormous increase in postal personnel, costly expansion of postal space, burgeoning postal rates and a postal gap between income and expenditure wider than the Grand Canyon."

Appomattox County post offices process a goodly share of the 70 billion pieces of mail generated nationally. The volume, they said, rises at the rate of 2½ billion pieces a year and by 1970 will total 90 billion.

Family Tensions

Lesson for April 19, 1964

A great deal of sentimental twaddle is written, preached or sung, about the family. People talk about the family and the home as if it were (if American, of course!) a bit of heaven on earth. But a family can be a bit of hell on earth too. A family is made up of imperfect people; and putting two or a dozen people under the same roof won't make angels of them. Two or six imperfects don't add up to anything perfect.

Again, a lot of scientific twaddle is spouted off, as wrong in its way as the sentimental twaddle. Scientists — sociologists, psychologists, economists and such — talk about the family as a cold-bloodedly as if it were a purely scientific phenomenon, like an earthquake or the hiving of bees. They look at it as if it were a human organism (which is the truth) and nothing more—which is far from true.

Where the Problems Are

Now the Bible is not something written in a vacuum or a monastery. Its writers were mostly married men (some of them happy, some unhappily); and they were not silent about marriage. As an example of Christian truth about marriage, consider the passage in Ephesians 5:21 through 6:4. Here we have the Christian home spoken of in 13 sentences, filled with wisdom on this problem. Saint Paul shows first that he knows where the trouble spots are. Today we call them tensions, a word suggesting that if two people are pulling against each other, "something's gotta give."

What We're After

Paul not only knew where the tensions are, he knew what is the ideal of marriage. Now it would be impossible for Paul either to state a problem or to suggest how to solve one, without a reference to Christ. That is the trouble with so much modern analysis of the marriage problem. It never gets within range of religion. But Paul comes to the One who for him and for us too (if we live up to our professions) is the Center, no matter what the thought or the action is. The ideal family life, we are here told, is a life between Christ and the church is the model for the relation of the various parts of the family to one another. Harmony, not identity, is the aim. No one person runs the family; that is dictatorship. There is organization; a good home is not a place where everyone does as he pleases without caring what any one else thinks or does. But organization, with a head who is really a head and not just a Sunday looker - on, organization which has as its aim not uniformity but harmony in love.

The Cure for What Ails Us

There are 13 sentences (as we noted) in this short passage; yet Christ is mentioned not less than nine times. Christ in the home lessens the tensions, and even all but destroys them. (No home is so good that it is forever free from the danger of tensions.) Out of the many ways in which this is true, consider one that is highlighted by St. Paul, the relation — which can be pretty tense — between husband and wife. He tells the wife to be subject to her husband, and many a man has taken this to mean that he is the sergeant and the family is the squad; so when he barks they should all jump. Not at all! Paul goes on to say something even stronger to the husband. You must love your wife as Christ loved the church, giving himself in sacrifice. The model for the husband - father is not taken from the rules of a cavalry regiment but from Calvary. And Paul says that not only the wife but each member of the family should be "in subjection" to the others. Each for all and all for each — if each and all are for Christ as He is for them, tensions will disappear.

Pastor Speaks

I BELIEVE . . . is a very popular secular - religious song made famous some years ago by Perry Como and his singers. Though it may have much which could be added, it does express one's faith in God.

All believe in something, even in unbelief — we have a faith even if it is in faith.

The father of a child brought him to Jesus to be healed, and when faced with a question by our Lord about his faith replied, "Lord I believe, help thou my unbelief" Mark 9:24.

I believe in Christ because He fills the deepest longings of my heart and life. He satisfies my hunger with the bread of life, and he slakes my thirst with the water of life. Really Christ is the answer. This is more than a platitude: it is a truism based upon experience.

I believe in Christ because He gives me the deepest insights of mind and spirit. In the community of faith established by my faith in Him, Christ sets in motion a reality that penetrates all of my mind and spirit.

As one thinks, so is he. Christ gives man thought patters, and attitudes of spirit which colors, flavors, and influences every area of his thoughts and spirit.

I believe in Christ because His love helps me to vault the barriers of my life.

"Build thee more stately mansions O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till at length thou art free ,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!
Holmes perhaps was trying to express the love that life gives. But I would want that love to be God Jesus our Lord.

I believe in Christ because in Him I have the foundation and philosophy which challenges me to build a useful life. Beyond my own relationship to Christ established by a vital faith in Him as my Lord, he gives me the motive I need. That motive is to serve others.

Actually all of us are happiest when we are serving others, when we are doing things to make others happy. In this we find life's fulfilment. And Christ motivates as no other can to unselfish service.

I believe in Him. He is the supplier for every good and noble deed. Do you believe in Him? Have you committed your life to Him? Are you a part of the Community of believers? Does His Church mean anything in your life? Why not make Him the center of your faith, and see to serve others through His Church, the channel of communication from God to man?

Dear Sir:

We just received word from District Forester Brierly that you folks are running a series of Smokey Bear fire prevention ads and will continue this effort for the next 20 or more weeks. It is very kind of you to do this and we are most grateful to both you and the people who are sponsoring these ads.

Needless to say, everything that can be done to alert the people of Virginia as to the importance of forest fire prevention is time and money well spent.

You and your staff have been extremely cooperative in the forest conservation movement. Please extend our thanks to Warden Dave Smith and his fire fighters, we thank you.

Sincerely,

As developed by the Industry-wide Lamb and Wool Palanning Committee, the program emphasizes the importance to both grower and the industry of such practices as proper shearing and tying techniques; eliminating unscourable blanding fluids, black fibers, tar, and chemical stain; avoiding jute and other extraneous contamination; separate packaging of tags, crutchings, face and hock wools; and improvement in the individual wool package.

'Improve your wool and you'll get a better market price and a higher payment under the national wool payment program. It is as simple as that,' the Chairman said. He suggested that wool growers consult with their county extension agent or their wool marketing agency if they have questions on how to shear and pack their wool to get the best possible price.

Good news.

The VEPCO strike is over!

A double vote of thanks from VEPCO

To our customers for their understanding and patience during the strike...sometimes under very trying conditions.

To our courageous and tireless supervisory and other employees, including a substantial number of employees represented by the IBEW, who kept service during the strike as reliable as humanly possible under such conditions.

To customers who suffered interruptions of electric and gas service, we want to express special thanks for their fortitude under this hardship . . . and for the patient understanding they showed while damage was being repaired. Our thanks go as well to all our customers. They faced nerve-racking uncertainty, but spared our over-burdened supervisory personnel the added load of answering the many questions which we well know were of real concern to them.

To our courageous employees who worked so valiantly during the strike emergency, we wish there was space here to name and thank each one individually. They took on tremendous added responsibilities and worked long hours to keep vital electricity and gas flowing. And they deserve highest congratulations for maintaining near normal service.

Finally, we do not believe the vast majority of striking employees intended this as a strike against the public. We believe that, in case of a severe storm or other disruptive disaster, they would not have let the public suffer for lack of their essential services.

As a result of the strike settlement, all employees have returned to their normal duties, and the teamwork which has made VEPCO one of the nation's most efficient, investor-owned utilities is being restored. This is good news!
